Emory University Summer Study Abroad

Chinese Language, Culture, and History
Beijing, China
May 18 — June 25, 2013

APPLICATION:

Applications to the program are available on the CIPA website at www.cipa.emory.edu.

The application will open on Dec. 15, 2012. Applications includes a $350 deposit (non-refundable if accepted to the program and applied to the cost of the program). The application deadline is March 1, 2013.

This program is accepting applications on a rolling basis. Students will be notified with the results within two weeks after submitting their complete application. CIPA encourages students to submit their applications as early as possible because some programs fill up by the end of January.

COST:

Academic fee: $8,400
Program fee: $2,300
TOTAL: $10,700

Includes fees for eight semester hours, health and accident insurance (duration of program), all accommodations, and three meals a day. Also includes excursion travel expenses and all program transportation during the program.

FINANCIAL AID:

Emory undergraduate students who qualify are considered by the Office of Financial Aid for a summer aid award after registration in summer study abroad classes. The amount of the award depends on the number of credits and current financial aid package. Students currently receiving financial aid from Emory are typically eligible. Contact the Office of Financial Aid for information about specific awards. Emory Scholars are informed separately about the procedures for Scholars Summer Study Abroad awards. Emory University Employee Courtesy Scholarships may be applied to the academic fee portion of the summer study abroad program’s cost. For more information, visit www.cipa.emory.edu or contact the Office of Financial Aid.

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION:
The Emory Summer Chinese Studies Program, offered through the Department of Russian and East Asian Languages and Cultures, provides students an exciting opportunity to study Chinese language, culture, and history in Beijing, China’s dynamic capital and site of the 2008 Olympic Games. The program collaborates with the prestigious Beijing Normal University, offering courses on Chinese language at all levels and a course on Chinese culture and society taught in English. No knowledge of Mandarin Chinese is required.

PROGRAM FACULTY:

COURSES:

CHINESE 105: Chinese Language and Culture of the Northwest.
In this course, students learn practical Mandarin Chinese needed for living in China and practice their language skills in natural settings. There will be two sections of language classes: one for beginners and the other for students with one or two years of training in Chinese. Special tutorial sessions will be arranged for advanced speakers of Chinese and for students with two or more years of Chinese. In addition to language instruction, a series of lectures on various aspects of Chinese culture is planned.

CHINESE 273:/ASIA 273 Heritage of China.
Taught in English, this course introduces China’s cultural heritage and contemporary society in the classroom and on site at historical and modern attractions in Beijing. This course provides a survey of key features of traditional Chinese society, culture and the arts and offers a unique opportunity to study traditional China and China’s development today.

HIGHLIGHTS:
• Earn eight Emory credit hours
• Learn Chinese language, culture, and history at Beijing Normal University, one of China’s leading institutions of higher learning
• Tour the Great Wall, Tian’anmen Square, Forbidden City, and many other historical and scenic sites in Beijing
• Trip to the city of Shanghai and/or Nanjing
• See Acrobatic and Martial Arts performances
